3. Access to Cold War Materials

Cold War material constitutes an active area of research in many repositories. This session will include a discussion of the status of access to national security materials, the experiences in gaining access and the role of the archivist in protecting national security while providing maximum access.

Participants:

William Burr, the National Security Archive
Page Putnam Miller, Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History
Robert Lester, University Publications of America
David Haight, Dwight D. Eisenhower Library: Chair/Commentator

Library, Media Theater Ground Floor

4. Planning Your Professional Life as a Series of Projects

This is a roundtable session on strategies for developing projects that can be funded by private and public agencies. It will address the need to define institutional goals, planning strategies to meet those goals, and designing projects that will help you meet your needs. It will also discuss matching your projects to available funding agencies and the essential elements you need for a strong proposal.

Participants:

Ann C. Webb, Tudor Place Foundation, Inc: "Conceptualizing and Defining a Project"
Nancy M. Shawcross, University of Pennsylvania Libraries: "Strategies for a Successful Proposal"
Carolyn S. Schumacher, Historical Society of Western Pa.: "Working Out the Details"

Lyceum, Pennsylvania Hall 3rd Floor

5. Beyond Form 80: Civil War Research in Federal Records

A professional genealogist and archivist specializing in genealogy will discuss Civil War research in Federal records from their unique perspectives. They will follow this with a discussion of both Union and Confederate records available in the National Archives.

Participants:
Marie V. Melchiori, Professional Genealogist
Constance Potter, Reference Services Branch, NARA

12. Computer Use in Archives: A Reassessment of Options and Practice in Mid-Atlantic Institutions

A survey of Mid-Atlantic manuscript repositories and historical agencies reveals that institutions have adopted very different approaches to such issues as cataloging and participation in national databases. This survey provides opportunities for evaluation of what programs and equipment are being used for which tasks, and how archives both large and small have responded to the demands and potentials of new technologies.

Participants:

Judy Robins, Annenberg Research Institute
Monique Bourque, Balch Institute for Ethnic Studies

CUB 126

13. Archives II: The Move Begins

As NARA begins the move of records to its new facility at College Park, an archivist will discuss the challenges of being in the forefront of the move and of moving special media. Other presentations will include relocation of textual records, conservation problems, and implications for reference service. NARA experiences may provide lessons for any archives planning a move of its holdings.

Participants:

John Dwyer, Cartographic and Architectual Branch
Maida H. Loescher, Records Relocation Branch
Mary Lynn Ritzenthaler, Document Conservation Branch
R. Michael McReynolds, Textual Reference Division
Michael Lewandowski, Suitland Ref. Branch: Chair/Commentor

INNOVATION THROUGH EXPERIENCE

BOOKKEEPER

PRESERVATION TECHNOLOGIES, INC.

Preserve Your Collections and The Environment...

Why Deacidify?

Preservation Technologies, Inc. is dedicated to the preservation of books, documents, and other valuable works of art on paper. BOOKKEEPER is the name for our patented deacidification process which neutralizes destructive acids present in most paper produced in the last 100 years. It is these acids which, if left unchecked, will cause embrittlement, yellowing, and eventual disintegration of the paper. BOOKKEEPER deacidification is a permanent treatment which also deposits a reserve of neutralizing agent (magnesium oxide) within the structure of the paper. This alkaline reserve will continue to neutralize harmful acids which paper can absorb from its surrounding atmosphere. One treatment converts unstable paper into a more permanent form with a lifespan which has been increased many fold.

Environmentally Safe!

Preservation Technologies now offers a deacidification spray to the archival and conservation community which is formulated to meet the environmental needs of the present and the future.
BOOKKEEPER is the only commercially available product which contains no ozone depleting and soon to be banned CFCs. Available in aerosol can or pump spray bottle. Larger containers can be provided for use with continuous spray systems.

Stay green - Use BOOKKEEPER.

Non Toxic Formulation...

BOOKKEEPER is a non-toxic and non-hazardous product which is odor free. No special precautions during application are required. Only normal hygiene practices and ventilation are recommended. Harmless magnesium oxide (a material well known to archivists) is used as the neutralizing agent. Treated materials quickly dry completely odor free.

No Adverse Impact On Inks, Colors, or Binding Materials...

BOOKKEEPER contains no alcohols or other "solvents" which can cause feathering of inks, smudging of colors, and deterioration of binding materials such as adhesives or leathers. After treating and testing numerous books, there has been no observed impact on print inks, colors, or any binding materials. Unlike competitive products there is no need for extensive pre-testing of materials to find the "right" formula and to determine the extent of any ill effects. One BOOKKEEPER product works safely for all materials.

Exposure To Moisture Is No Concern To BOOKKEEPER...

Finally, unlike other products, no adverse chemical reaction occurs upon exposure of BOOKKEEPER to moisture causing blocking of the aerosol spray nozzle or rapid deterioration of the product itself. You use all of the product you purchased.

Let Us Convince You That BOOKKEEPER Deacidification Products Are For You...

Continuous Tone Filming

Collections of photographs and negatives are as much in danger of disappearing from use or age as are embrittled books. To help preserve these collections, MAPS has developed a continuous tone filming (CTF) technique that achieves superior resolution while meeting all preservation standards.

- Preserve photos, negatives, prints, and half-tones
- Resolution up to 200 lines per millimeter
- Easily converted to Kodak Photo CD format for expanded access
- High quality—15-19 steps on gray scale
